THE PRESTIDIGITATOR'S TRICK.

How He Got Even With the Very Persistent English Passenger.

A well known American prestidigitator was a passenger recently on one of the big Atlantic liners, homeward bound from England. He is a good natured conjurer, and many times in the smoking room he exhibited his skill in performing tricks for the amusement of the other passengers. One of the frequenters of the smoking room was an Englishman, who seemed to be unable to get enough of the conjurer's tricks. Almost every time the American entered the room the Englishman demanded something more, and usually the American complied. The conjurer took part in the ship's concert and did a lot of surprising things with cards. The Englishman was in a front seat and followed the performance with absorbed interest. But the next morning when the American walked into the smoking room after breakfast the Englishman repeated his old demands. The conjurer picked up from one of the little tables a pack of cards, which had been used in the whist game of the evening before. He handed it to the Englishman and said:

"Pick out a card."

The Englishman ran over the pack and made mental note of his selection. "Shuffle them up," commanded the prestidigitator.

The Englishman shuffled the cards severely, cut and shuffled again. Then the conjurer shuffled them. After that he laid them out, one by one, in several little piles. The Englishman watched him with rapt attention. The conjurer gathered up the little piles and gave the pack to the Englishman again.

"Shuffle them again," he said.

The Englishman did it, and then the conjurer picked up the pack and said: "Now, do you remember what card it was you selected?"

"Oh, yes," answered the Englishman. "I remember it."

"Of course not."

"You can name the card?"

"Certainly."

"Well, then, there's no use of my telling you what it is."

And the conjurer threw down the cards and went out, followed by roars of laughter from those who had seen the trick. —New York Sun.

ONE ON LEAP YEAR.

This is the latest on leap year: A well known young gentleman declined to call upon a very charming young lady living in Queen Anne town when pressed for a reason he said: "She is too much like Ranie. Beer. She's bright, sparkling and pure, and so full of life I am afraid she will 'pop.' On tap or in bottles at the Criterion."
